NEW CITY HALL.

Thirty-two Plans For the Proposed Municipal Headquarters Submitted.

All Styles of Architecture Represented in the Competition Which Closed Yesterday.

Sketches of the Designs Presented to the Judges in the Contest.

THE COMMISSION TO MEET TO-MORROW AND PERFORM THE DIFFICULT TASK OF MAKING A SELECTION.

Faithful Reproductions of Several of the Most Striking Plans Handed in to the City Hall Commission—A Magnificent Edifice to Be Erected to Accommodate the City's Office Holders—Rules Governing the Competition—The New Hall to Be Built in Washington Square—Who the Judges Are That Will Make the Selection.

THE POST-DISPATCH presents this morning a representative collection of the front elevations and perspectives of plans for the new City Hall building which is contemplated. Washington Park, between Twelfth and Thirteenth streets, Market street and Clark avenue, is the site proposed. There are thirty-seven plans now in the hands of the City Hall Commission, and from these it is expected that one suitable for the purposes of the city can be found. If one such plan is found the designer will test, who will go over the plans in detail and make his decisions as to the most meritorious. Then it remains with the commission to decide which will be accepted and which will be rejected. Each plan was accompanied with a typical description of the building. Some of these were very technical, while others gave a good general idea of what the architect had in mind, and the disposition and arrangement he was making of the various offices and rooms.

A brief description of each plan is given to indicate in a general way the ideas of the artists.

light brick and terra cotta; corridors, halls, vestibules, etc., to be finished with marble and wainscoted with endolithic; staircases to be constructed of iron and marble; partitions to be of hollow brick; roof to be made of tile, slate and copper. Estimated cost, $750,000.

This design is practically a parallelogram, being in the main 240x230 feet, and covering about 75,000 square feet. The height from the ground to the top of the dome is 234 feet. The diameter of the dome is 64 feet and the main floor is to be on the second floor. The interior is finished as far as practicable under the corridor walls. Public space in the building to be faced with tile. Building to be lighted by electric lights and heated by steam.

The general plan in this building is to locate the legislative halls at either end of the building. The other departments to be located toward the center of the building in the order of their importance and frequency of use. X. X. X. says in conclusion that he approves most highly of the plan of a general competition from the profession, and intends to stand or fall by the decision.

main hall, with secondary offices in the wings.

The parallelogram style with open courts and an abundance of light and air to be used. On the first floor the Police and Fire Departments, Inspector of Weights and Measures and the Health Department to be situated. On the second floor the Mayor's office and houses of legislation. The heating to be done by steam controlled by electric apparatus. The building to be constructed of brick and granite in alternate courses. A tower to be placed on the east front facing Walnut street to give emphasis to the building.

The method pursued by "Plan" in arriving at a plan for the building was to group the rooms of the several departments together in rectangular shapes containing the superficial feet required, and then placing these groups as seemed best for convenience, contiguity and light, and so as to correspond with the general oblong shape of the lot.

The dimensions of the building to be 475 feet on Twelfth street and 317 feet on Market street. The main entrance tower to be 44 feet high. The Council chamber and delegate chamber to be 44 feet 6 inches, with galleries and rooms over same.

The claims set forth for this building are arrangement and convenience of the legislative and business departments and their relation to each other and design with regard to sound practical construction and architectural effect.

MISSOURI GRANITE AND BRICK. "The building is to be a fire-proof structure, as described in the code. The main walls of hard brick in cement mortar, partitions of terra cotta tile, floors and roof with steel beams and terra cotta arches, the supporting columns of cast iron. The exterior to be of Missouri granite and pressed brick, roofing of copper.

The architect says of this building: The principal entrance is placed in the middle of the building and centers on Walnut street. It has been considered that this, with the entrance on Thirteenth street, is sufficient, but if so desired, additional entrances can be made in both wings.

The ascent and descent is made from floor to floor almost entirely with elevators. The Mayor's office is provided with a balcony and its location is such as to give him a commanding position in case of review or other public demonstration.

The general plan of the building is in substance: The building to be of red Missouri granite to the floor line of the second floor. The second, third and fourth floors to be of pressed brick. The floors are to be constructed of iron beams, the space between them to be filled with porous earthenware arches. The finishing of brass, stone and iron.

This building is to be about sixty feet from the Twelfth street line, the space to be divided into grass plots, with walks approaching building or with one wide walk.

The first floor is entered on four sides, a corridor extending through the building from north to south. The various rooms are arranged with a view to their importance.

The main entrance will extend upward to a level with the ceiling of the Council Chamber and be covered with an ornamental glass ceiling.

The claim for this building made by its architect is that it is useful and within the limits of cost. The architectural plan is the peculiar American development of the Romanesque. The details of the design are calculated to withstand the action of dirt and soot.

There are four principal entrances, those on the east and west wings being covered. A grand staircase leads primarily to the Council and House of Delegates.

The building is well lighted with direct light and each room is accessible from all parts of the building. The rooms are grouped to throw all departments related to each other in close connection. The building to be heated by steam, except in a few of the higher offices where fire-places can be put.

with ample light and air. The chambers of the houses of legislation to extend through the second and third stories. There are to be five first-story entrances, and a large tower on the Twelfth street facade in the axis of Walnut street.

The style proposed is French Romanesque, with a few early Gothic features. The whole building to be absolutely fire proof, with concrete foundation, walls and brick and partitions of hollow terra cotta tiles. The floors made of flattened terra cotta arches, supported on rolled iron beams. The building to be lighted with both gas and incandescent electric lights.

The general exterior to be in the style of Louis XV., and constructed of Missouri granite and St. Louis pressed brick, slate roofs, copper decks, crests, etc. The interior to have marble floors in the halls and public spaces of the offices and hallways, for the balance. The building to be thoroughly fire-proof. The whole building to be in exact accordance with the instructions.

"BLACK AND BERRY." The plans of the above are for a building situated in the middle of Washington square with a large roomy foreground. On the west side is an open court for the accommodation of vehicles, etc.

The building to be heated by a system of hot water gravity circulation, heating with direct radiation. The building to have six elevators, two of which run to the full height of the lower: a carved iron is the tower to represent episodes of the early history of St. Louis and the Mississippi Valley.

The elevation of the building to be of steel and the partitions to be of terra cotta lumber. The exterior walls to be faced with granite or of sand will be used in the plastering of the Council Chamber for acoustic effect.

The basement contains the street Service Department storerooms for supplies; two entrances are provided in the rear for wagons. The first floor contains all of the rooms required in the code. In front of the building is an imposing loggia with a monumental step. The other floors are according to code, with fresco and carved ornamentation.

In plan the building resembles a huge rectangular horseshoe, consisting of two parallel wings facing Market street and Clark avenue, and connecting on the Twelfth street side. The space between the wings, about 8x100 opening on Thirteenth street, forms an open court. Each wing measures 156x124 feet, with a total frontage of about 300 feet on Twelfth street. The Twelfth street front rises about 25 feet above the sidewalk. The style is Italian Renaissance of the fifteenth century.

The descriptions accompanying the plans give the quality of material and details for various floors without a general description of the building entire.

The total cost of the building to be $1,000,000. The building to be totally fire-proof and the materials of the greatest durability. In the basement on south side of south court is a tier of rooms to be used as offices. A driveway to run into the basement leading directly to elevators, meter rooms, and fuel and machinery rooms. The steps, buttresses, plat-forms, etc., to be of granite, all the above to be Missouri granite; all the openings to have granite sills. The steps, buttresses, plat-forms, etc., to be of granite. Outside walls to be of best stock brick, including corner, burglar proof vaults, the floors to have steel beams and heavy terra cotta tile arches, covered with best Portland cement. All hardware to be of solid bronze.

The general outline of this building conforms somewhat to the shape of the letter "P." All rooms will be well-lighted with large and numerous windows. The style of the interior is generally Romanesque, with modern and liberal treatment. The style is carried out in a simple and effective manner, with due regard not only to economy, but also to the grandeur and dignity of the great city whose uses it is to serve. The roofs are to be of slate and copper, the trusses, rafters, purlins and ceilings to be of iron. One of the novel features in the construction of the building is the floors, in which the uses of wrought iron beams and the usual fireproof construction of brick or terra cotta, etc., is almost wholly dispensed with. The substitute consists of a method of concrete arches arranged in spans of 16x20 feet square, sprung directly from the walls and iron columns, carrying the weights directly to the points of support. The advantages obtained hereby, are simplicity of construction, durability and minimum of weight. These arches at once present a finished ceiling and finished floor of artificial stone, superior in wearing quality and durability to any natural stone except granite.

These floors are to be laid on the various apartments where required with a neat wood strip for the purpose of receiving rugs and carpets. The heating is to be by steam coils, and arranged in the window bays that they receive a supply of fresh air from the outside, which will be properly heated before being distributed throughout the rooms. The estimated cost of the building will be under the amount allowed by the ordinance. All his estimates are made in detail, and amount to $944,000.

All of the departments to be of easy access.

other stone. The corridor floors and wainscoting to be of tile or marble. The finish of the halls of legislation and Mayor's office to be of oak.

The general plan of this building is a simple rectangle, 185x340 feet, to be placed with the longer facades to the east and west, with main entrances opposite Walnut street. The main corridor leads across the building from east to west, connecting the east and west entrances and containing central passenger elevators and main staircases. The heights of the chambers are as follows: First story, 20 feet in the clear; second story, 20 feet in the clear; third story, 20 feet in the clear; fourth story, 18 feet in the clear. The building reaches from south of Missouri granite, rock face and St. Louis pressed brick. The dormers and cornices to be composed of terra cotta with finials and crests of copper. Roof to be of slate with copper and slate. The building to be thoroughly fire proof. The floors of the main halls, public spaces and rooms and the third story, 20 feet in the clear; fourth story, 18 feet in the clear. walls and ceiling of all the corridors painted. Legislative chambers handsomely frescoed on canvas. Each spandrel contains a medallion with heroic bas relief bust. Principal office of each department handsomely frescoed, remaining rooms tastefully decorated in warm tints.

Vestibule to main entrance and all tiled corridors and galleries and sides of stairways wainscoted with marble. Marble trends provided to all stairways from basement to fourth story. There will be six hydraulic elevators; building to be properly wired for incandescent electric lighting.

"DOUBLE STAR AND CRESSENT." Light red, for basement and first story; the other stories to be of dark red pressed brick. Cornices of dark red stone and terra cotta. Approaches and steps to be of granite. Partitions to be built independent of the support of the floors. All doors of marble tiling and the wainscoting of polished marble. The Council Chamber and House of Delegates chamber to be finished in Saguaro for side walls and Carlton Pierre for ceilings. Ceiling tiles to be of stained glass. All offices to be finished in oak, a central glazed court, elegantly finished, the pavement to be marble.

MYOTONIA AND THE WORLD'S FAIR.
Interesting Case and Facts Considered by the St. Louis Medical Society.

The St. Louis Medical Society last night considered several subjects, the most interesting being a supposed case of non-congenital myotonia. The disease is very rare, Dr. A. B. Shaw said, or at least the number of recorded cases is but 20. The literature of the disease is limited. He said the first description of the disease was printed in 1874. Of the thirty cases all but two were plainly congenital. In the two exceptions it was impossible to find any trace of the disease in the history of the ancestors. The patient was present. His name is James McEvoy, and he is now an inmate of the City Hospital. Dr. A. W. Fleming who has had him under observation gave a history of the case, described the manifestations of the disease and observed that the patient ate double rations of food, thereby costing the city 17½ cents per day, instead of 8½ cents as do ordinary patients. McEvoy's father was Irish born and a strong healthy man, a miser and gambler at times in California.

His mother was a robust German-American who died within a year of pneumonia. His sisters are strong, healthy women and no account of disease can be obtained from family history. McEvoy worked in a damp silver mine when a boy, but when he grew older went to work in a silver mill where he worked in the leaching of ore. The dust was so plentiful that all the men worked with sponges over their mouths. One day he felt a twitching in his left arm, and the limb was raised without his volition by the contraction of the muscles. This attack was short and did not return, and presently other muscles became involved, and after some months this condition of contracting muscles became permanent. All the muscles of his body are apparently paralyzed, and he cannot control the movements of his feet and legs at all times, and it is with difficulty that he can rise from a seat to his feet. He attempted to do so under the direction of Dr. Shaw and Dr. Fleming, but he could not be kept down. After some time

Dr. Tuhulski, chairman of the sub-Finance Committee of the World's Fair, addressed the society on the subject of their subscriptions to the guaranty fund. Forty thousand dollars is asked of the physicians and he said $20,000 had been subscribed. The country, he said, could not afford to see the fair go to Chicago. That was what he wanted to see. To that end he was making a list of names of physicians who would be an invitation to pestilence. As sanitarians and as citizens he said it was the duty of St. Louis physicians to all in their power to bring the fair to St. Louis.

POLITICS IN ARKANSAS

THE REPUBLICAN PARTY TOO DEAD TO EVER BE RESURRECTED.

Power of the Wheel in the State—Its Members Too Shrewd to Permit it to Become a Factor in State Politics—Men Who Are Willing to Accept Governoratorial Honors.

Telegraph to the POST-TRIBUTER.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark.,
Nov. 16.—Although the candidates for State officers on the Democratic ticket will not be nominated for many months, yet neverthe-

men who will compose the next cabinet, and at this time it is evident that there will be an exciting contest over the nomination for nearly every office from governor down to superintendent of public schools. So far as concerns the Republicans, it is immaterial whether they are elected or defeated. In a hopeless minority in the Senate, with no hope of future success, any ticket that party may name is doomed to defeat, and will probably be run (if run at all) to further the ambition of Powell Clayton and tighten his grasp upon the Federal patronage in the State, and to keep the Democrats through the next campaign in a hopeless minority. It will never be a factor in the Kansas politics. It is dead beyond hope of revival.

THE POWERFUL WHEEL.

The Wheel, an organization of farmers and mechanics, with a membership of more than 100,000, would prove an important political element in the coming election. It is probably more than two-thirds of the members are Democrats who will not, and wisely permit it to be drawn into political issues. It is true that a number of counties are controlled by the Wheelers who are chosen on local issues and in opposition to the regular Democratic nominees, but the Wheel is not a party in itself, and to do so to figure in the last gubernatorial contest would be to lose its identity. In 1900, it received a small percentage of the Wheel vote, but he was not indorsed as its candidate. It has remained neutral, and remained true to the Democracy and supported J. P. Eagle and the entire Democratic ticket.

He wished to offer for the position in 1886. He was disappointed in the result of the election, and was glad to see Democrats so availing themselves of their chances for the succession. He was in the city on Monday, and called on the Post-Dispatch correspondent he heard the names of the candidates, and among them were the names of Harrison, Gen. D. M. Reynolds of Boone County, and Hon. D. E. Barker of Boone County. He was surprised to find that the above named Democrats, that none of them were candidates; but such and all have been transformed into Republicans. He would not work most earnestly to secure the nomination of the Republican party.

OTHER STATE OFFICERS.

For the office of Secretary of State there is, as far as no opposition, Hon. B. B. Chiles, present incumbent, who is serving his first Senator Durr will probably be opposed by J. A. W. Files, who has held the office and is a hard worker and a good politician, when he was a candidate for the position. Both are strong, and should make a good team. The election for treasurer will be of unusual interest. Treasurer Woodruff will also have opposition. He is a good man, but a poor politician. Friends of one of the most prominent Democrats in the State are canvassing for him. It is possible that the candidacy of their favorite is opposed by both favor and opposition. Commissioner, now held by Capt. Paul Goba, has several strong opponents. It is not known whether or not Gen. J. F. Smith will be a candidate. The Democratic nomination, will be made by the party.

There are a number of candidates for the position of Public Instruction. Prof.

Mr. Thompson is the present incumbent. As the term of his office expires on the 1st of November, he is expected to be sought for by candidates from all quarters of the State.

The next twelve months will be a period of more than ordinary interest in the politics of the State. Within that period there will be a contest for Governor, and it will involve the duty of electing a United States Senator to succeed James A. Jones. The people will be disposed with determination, it being understood, to elect a man who will be well equipped for the place. Senator Jones has been doing some effective work throughout the State, and has been especially successful in the number of fairs in Southern and Northwest Kansas. The topics he discussed were the most important, and he has been very well appreciated the people very favorably. United States Senator Berry also discussed these topics, and he has been very successful in the State during the last six or eight weeks.

the slashed sleeves and deep collar, and the long curling hair of a period when the picturesque of the male garb was at its meridian.

Sir Joshua Reynolds has left us many models of beautiful women, and the London girl in waltz, the girl flowing from, and the brownish green and peach brocades he delighted in crop out frequently in the modern dress of the day. It is the Duchess of Hamilton and Lady Cowper who are beautiful Gorgons—whom we have learned to know at fancy dances, but Miss Theophilus Palmer reading "Clarissa" furnishes a simpler model.

Miss W. J. Grant Morgan, Mrs. Cutting and Miss Cutting wore yards of pinkie toilette ribbon, and the latter also wore a hat with Mrs. Fish went as a Paul Veronese and Mrs. De Forest as an orange velvet and black. The only thing to be regretted in a collection that picturesque elements will prevail, is that the more of the modern and the eccentricity, for some time to come in women's attire.

THE BEST GIFT YET.

A Hint for Those Who Want to Know What to Give at Christmas.

At Christmas men and women do their best to please each other and to increase the sum of human happiness by making presents. Often Christmas presents are inappropriate. Those that please the best are the gifts that please the largest number of people at the same time. In a home nothing gives joy to the whole family so much as a picture of some member of the family put forward as a genuine surprise. Photographs and crayons hit the mark every time as Christmas gifts. Probably the old folks are nearing the brink of the grave and there is no picture of them in the house. Their hearts are made glad when they are asked to sit for photographs, because they then know that their faces will not fade entirely from view when the grave closes over them. A crayon on the wall is a constant delight to father or mother whose face shines in it. So, too, husband and wife like to behold each other's faces in mirrors.

which has been chosen by one of the buds of the season for her forthcoming debut at an afternoon tea. This picture gown, which I was permitted to peep at yesterday, is true enough to its original so that when arrayed in it the bud might have stepped but five minutes since from her last century frame, and yet it is a simple dress, and not ill adapted to a modern parlor nor out of touch with the prevailing ideas of the day. A neutral tinted silk is the stuff chosen, such a fabric as the Vicar of Wrexham picked out that it might wear well. The bare pound, arms show dimpled elbows and the bare is rolled back from the smooth forehead, while an early arrival stands a chance of seeing the illusion completed by the pose on a cushion in the window seat and an air of fascinated interest in the book—not "Clarissa," but something decidedly more thrilling—which she is reading.

which I have not yet seen attempted, but which would offer abundant opportunity to someone who may have the fancy and the possession of a fair bright face like that of Mrs. Thrane would be the turban looped with pearls and dress gathered by a shawl girdle, which Reynolds has depicted as the garb of a most fascinating woman. One of the finest picture gowns at the Artists' Festival in Boston, last spring, was worn by Miss A. M. Harwood, who appeared as Georgiana, Duchess of Devonshire, lending to an event of such importance her zealous patronage. The dress was beautiful in its tasteful simplicity and strict fidelity to the details of the painting. The broad black velvet that trimmed with blue ribbon and black petrich trim was set on of the powdered hair with long curls flowing over the shoulders. The white silk overdress figured with flowers was trimmed with narrow white lace and tied at the waist with a blue ribbon. Beneath this was a petticoat of light blue silk. A white sash was draped about the shoulders with a rose on the left breast, and in one hand she carried a tall walking stick mounted with a silver head.

The skirt, which is rose-colored satin, has a handsome composition of ten ruffles of silk, very full and puffed, giving a shape to the drapery which it will always retain. The overdress has the same ruffles on either side of the front breadth and caught

THE BEST GIFT YET.

A Hint for Those Who Want to Know What to Give at Christmas.

At Christmas men and women do their best to please each other and to increase the sum of human happiness by making presents. Often Christmas presents are inappropriate. Those that please the best are the gifts that please the largest number of people at the same time. In a home nothing gives joy to the whole family so much as a picture of some member of the family put forward as a genuine surprise. The picture is made and given the mark every time as Christmas gifts. Probably the old folks are nearing the brink of the grave and their children are plotting to bury them in the house. Their hearts are made glad when they are asked to sit for photographs, because they know that their faces will not fade and their names will live when the grave closes over them. A crayon on the wall is a constant delight. To father or son, to mother or wife like to behold each other's faces in pictures, and parents are fond of seeing their children's eyes glancing at their own little crayons or artistic photos. There is only one man in town whose crayons and photos are so popular. He is a young fellow, 24, at 1245 Franklin avenue. His rooms are always crowded, his patronage is the best, his prices the lowest. He is a young fellow, 24, at 1245 Franklin avenue. If the law is repealed, all pre-emptions where final proof has not been made are defeated. This involves the rights of every settler in the four States who has not proved up his claim. In the absence of a law, no claims it is believed settlers would be allowed to prove up anyhow. The Northern Pacific company is already largely interested and will resort to the courts.

Down Where the Fire Rages.

From the San Francisco Argonaut.

Prof. Jones answers (in an English newspaper) the question raised as to whether the tapping and drilling of the earth for gas and oil is dangerous or not—that is to say, likely to set off the internal fire of the earth to play havoc with the surface of the land and ocean. He compares the earth to a balloon inflated and kept distended by the gas in the interior, which, if exhausted, will cause the crust to fall in. He says that if the gas is exhausted in its orbit, cause it to lose its place among the heavenly bodies and fall in pieces. Another writer thinks that drilling should be prohibited by stringent laws. The scientist says an immense cavity mile below the bottom of the cavity is a mass of roaring, seething flame, which is gradually eating into the rock floor of the cavern and shattering it. Eventually the flames will reach the gas and a terrific explosion will occur. The simile of the ear being blown a balloon is not very solid. Why not weigh the gases and settle the question of solidity? The scientists can weigh the gas and measure the degree as long, but the result is hardly a trouble.

The original of this portrait and the hero of our story was the son of Nicholas Osburn, a Gloucestershire squire of ancient and honorable lineage, and was born at Compton Scorfen in Warwickshire—the residence of his maternal grandfather—in 1581. At the age of 14 he entered Queen's College, Oxford, where he speedily distinguished himself in logic and philosophy, and where, in 1596, he obtained the degree of B. A. For a short time he studied law in the Middle Temple, London; but he was dissatisfied with the Continent, whence he returned what was then called "a finished gentleman"—knowing how to do nothing easily and gracefully. Not long after his return, while on his way to visit his father, he was introduced to a friend in the person of Robert Carr, (more properly Ker), who was then page in the service of the Earl of Dunbar. An intimacy quickly sprang up between the brilliant and handsome Earl of Bath and the handsome, ignorant, sensual, unscrupulous, yet shrewd and ambitious page; and when Overbury went to London, Carr accompanied him to see his fortune at court. He did not have to seek long, for when James mounted the throne in 1603, he quickly singled out Carr as an object of royal favor—for two reasons, probably: Because he was a Scotchman, and because he had a certain sort of suggestive beauty. Be this as it may, Carr climbed rapidly and in 1613 the impecunious adventurer from "the Land of Cakes" was made Lord High Treasurer of Scotland and created an English peer under the name and title of VISCOUNT OF ROCHESTER.

 Meanwhile Overbury, who had become a secretary to the King, exerted all his influence

In the behalf of the favorite, who, in return, had him knighted in 1608 and his father appointed him knight of the shire, the Earl's fervent belief that Overbury had so completely gained the confidence of the garrulous monarch as to be in possession of some perilous secrets, which he used to his own advantage. It was known that the Earl had been in the service of the king by doing very dirty work for him on demand; and a certain piece of such work it was which cost him his life, and led to one of the worst scandals of the many which have blackened the reign of James the First. The Earl was a woman in the case, and the woman was Lady Francis Howard, a daughter of the house to which the Dukes of Norfolk belong, and wife of the Earl of Essex. She was beautiful, wild her strongest point. Consequently she was quite willing to meet the devil, in the person of Rochester, half way and more when he made his advances. A criminal in the light of her husband's infidelity, and in this intrigue Overbury seemed to have been a very active and efficient agent and go-between. But the fair sinner intended to be well paid for her sin. She had long since tired of her husband, and now got rid of that burden, she was free to marry her paramour, which will not bear reproduction in print. Now she was ready to marry her paramour, who was still climbing the ladder of royal woman you will utterly ruin your honor and yourself. You shall never do it with my advice or consent, and if you do you had best beware of fast, riotous, and drunken turns from him in a furious rage, exclaiming: 'By— I will be even with you for this!' Overbury had made two desperate and implacable enemies by his ill-timed counsel; for Rochester, straightaway reported his disapproval of the plan to his wife, who immediately began their plot to 'get even' with the object of a common hate by a deliberate and diabolical revenge. The game was finely played. They concealed their designs from the King the appointment of Overbury as Ambassador to Russia, but at the same time urged him to decline the office, as it was a mere trick to get him out of England, promising to protect him from any unpleasant consequences should he second the King's wish. Overbury—who seems to have been of an unsuspicious nature—declined accordingly. James was made very angry thereby. Rochester did nothing to soothe him—probably did not think it worth the effort—and Overbury was forthwith sent to the Tower of London, then the prison for all State criminals.

nals. Once within those gloomy walls he was at the mercy of the conspirators; and their tenderest mercy was direct cruelty. The first day after the Rising, the King named the Lieutenant of the Tower and appointment of Sir Jervis (or Gerrals) Elwes to the vacancy. A man named Richard Weston, who had been a druggist's clerk, was given the name of under keeper, and as such had charge of the person of Overbury. Both Elwes and Weston were mere tools of Rochester. The latter meanwhile kept up the mask of friendship with Overbury, wrote him frequent letters of sympathy, Similar presents were sent to Kriewas to avoid suspicion, but in these of course the poison was omitted. The agent employed to procure the deadly drugs was a Mrs. Turner, who, as mistress of a house of ill-fame, had access to the underworld, and to Rochester and the Countess of Kexet. The poison was prepared by a Dr. Jorman, a fortune-teller of Lembeh, assisted by an apothecary named the king, who was hurt by them, having recently been created a duke, and was so much affected by the suggestion, immediately after the consummation of the marriage, his reverence and Lady Lucy were both put to death. From that day the star of the favorite, as Overbury had predicted, began to pale. A rival was now introduced, in the person of a young Buckingham, to whom James, either tired of the influence of the queen, or perhaps desirous to reverse his loathsome love, Buckingham, in the year 1614, was introduced into the king's confidence, and resolved to ruin his predecessor beyond redemption, and for that purpose stirred up the queen to the execution of a cruel and bloody revenge on the cause of his death. The king, who was then twenty years of age, was so much affected by the queen's passion, that he was obliged to flee the country. The estate of the king, which was valued at 200,000*l.* was sold for 100,000*l.* and the king gave him out of the treasury an annuity of 24,000*l.* which was paid him for the next year. Nothing is known, it is said, however, on the subject of the king's death.
